country rest upon. With regard to the rest of the satisfaction reported to have been exacted for the Yunnan Outrage we are bound to confess disappointment. The information first received from Chefoo spoke of an indemnity which was to cover compensation to the relatives of the murdered MARGARY. The first and most natural conclusion was that the remainder included for the plaintiffs, and Mr. Sharp for defendant. the cost incurred by keeping a Squadron out here and other large and unnecessary expenses. SUPREME COURT September 27th. SUMMARY JURISDICTION. BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SNOWDEN.

MATERIAL. THE HONGKONG AND WHAMPOA DOG COMPANY v. TAM AMOW, $1,000.—The hearing of this case was resumed. Mr. Brereton was Mr. Gillies, the secretary of the company produced the account books containing the Witness replied that they would trust to Mr. Duncan. There was no entry in the minutes concerning the transaction. The account now aned upon had been sent in to defendant before charge for dockage in the daybook; only the number of days was enter d. It was not usual first made for dockage was $250. sent in to the Messageries Maritimes, which

Mr. Sharp, in opening the case for the defence referred to the contract. In it nothing was said as to what the lighters were for. The contract was simply for three lighters. The last clause of the agreement stated that they should be built according to specifications and finished to the entisfaction of the Dock Com pany's superintendents. There was no guarantee whatever, either that they should not lenk time. They were simply to be built to the eathefaction of the Dock Company's super wrights in the colony, and therefore the company had every opportunity of testing and surveying the workmanship. The boats were built on the alip rented by the company solely, as he put it, that the company might have the superintendence of the building. Not only was Duncan, the shipwright, constantly down there watching the progress of the work, but an officer of the company, named Smith, was naile, and everything put into the boats were enhantted to this man Smith for approval here was also Mr. Barros, an overseer appointed by the Messageries Maritimes to look after proved, on bo less than three occasions did captains connected with the Messageries Marimurder in which they may or may not times, with their engineers and corponters, not efendant was always willing to comply with the wishes of Smith and Barros, and when they more could be do? Every precaution was taken opportunity, but they did actually survey the opportunity of the trial trip and were apparently highly satisfied. The money was not paid until some days after this trial trip. Then they had it in evidence that all new boats leaked a little. But that was not all. Were they to be charged this tremendous bill for this leakage when the fault, if there was any? No independent survey was taken whatever. Defendant got no notice, otherwise he might have taken the boats on the slip again and have easily repaired them bimself, and very likely much cheaper than the Dock Company. He got no opportunity even of going to see the boats. He did not know they were in dock, and now, fourteen months after, he was to be sued in this manner. He never received notice of any claim until several months had clapsed, and he had since done other work for the company and been paid for it. Mr. Sharp then referred his Lordship to Chilty's chapter on services and works. All the cases cited in Chitty and Addison were cases in which objection-was made-to-payment. Here the payment was made and receipt given, and then, for sooth, months afterwards they were to pay damages for not fulfilling the contract. He could not find a case exactly bearing on the particular point arising in this case. He contended the defendant ought to have had an opportunity of repairing the damage, if there was any. It was simply a leak, nothing else, and all new vessels leak to a certain extent. Then with respect to rotten wood, he did not want to disbelieve Mr. Liddell, but there might be differences of opinion as to what rotten wood is.

Messageries Maritimes' servants, and was done to the satisfaction of all parties. The defendant was then onlied. He said had often done work for the Dock Company He built these boats on Jardine's slip by direction of Mr. Duncan. The laying of the keels was superintended by a person whose name he had forgotten, in the employ of the Dock Company, who was sent down from Whampoa. Smith came. All the wood was in the yard and Mr. Smith and the other person selected them was always present except during meal off to a ship. They were sent to superintend the work. Mr. Barros was there to watch the work for the Messageries Maritimes, and and approved of the nails used. I'wo inchplanks were used. They were measured by Smith, Barros, and witness himself.
